The Wertzone: A Sword from Red Ice by J.V. Jones

A SWORD FROM RED ICE is not the end of a trilogy, but a transitional step in a longer tale, which is probably why there seems to be a lack of forward progress in the overall story. The plots involving Raif and Raina (especially Raina's) are as strong and as intense as expected.

The Red Sword is one of several names given to a comet of unusual brightness that appeared in the night skies over Westeros and Essos in the year 299 AL, during the early part of the War of the Five Kings. It was also called the Dragon's Tail, Prince Joffrey's Comet (in King's Landing), Mormont's Torch (amongst the sworn brothers of the Night's Watch) and, amongst the Dothraki, the Bleeding ...

Red Sword | A Song of Ice and Fire Wiki | Fandom

A Sword from Red Ice just added more to the previous works. The thing that always stands out the most to me, though, is the characters. You get so into them that you care when one of their horses dies (or pony, as the case may be). The journey with Raif through the Great Want and with Ash closer to the Heart of the Sull lands is alternately ...
