"So the Wind Won't Blow it all Away" is a beautifully-written, brooding gem of a novel - set in the Pacific Northwest region of Oregon where Brautigan spent most of his childhood. Through the eyes, ears and voice of Brautigan's youthful protagonist the reader is gently led into a small-town tale where the narrator accidentally shoots dead his best friend with a gun.

So the Wind Won't Blow it All Away by Richard Brautigan

So the Wind Won't Blow It All Away is a beautifully written, brooding gem of a novel from an author who was a complex, contradictory, and often misunderstood genius. It is set in the Pacific Northwest where Brautigan spent most of his childhood. It is 1979, and a man is recalling the events of his twelfth summer, when he bought bullets for his gun instead of a hamburger.

Fragmented, often haunting memories of a 1940s small-town childhood; all of them shadowed, fairly effectively, by the fact that this childhood will be jolted into adolescence by an accidental killing. The narrator; unnamed, wistful, a trifle arch; moves around in time, framing his recollections with one particular evening in 1947: it's summer, by a pond, and the narrator-as-a ...
